Gmail is a web-based email service from Google. In addition to letting you store lots of emails and send bigger files with your emails, it lets you sort your emails into multiple categories, including just whether they're important or not. Also, emails you send and receive with the same person over and over are grouped together, so you can follow a conversation easily.

"I had no idea that my daughter used a different type of computer than I did. I thought they all worked the same. When I called her in a panic and she couldn't help me, I felt lost. Luckily, my neighbor also has a PC, and he came to my rescue."

—Dan

Technically, a Mac is also a personal computer (PC), but it has the prestige of carrying its own brand name. For our purposes an Apple computer is a Mac, and everything else is a PC.

Many companies followed in the footsteps of the original IBM PC and actually surpassed IBM in sales. Some of the manufacturers' names might be familiar to you: Hewlett-Packard (HP), Dell, and Toshiba, among others.

What Makes a PC and a Mac So Different?

When Apple introduced the first Macintosh in 1984, the differences between its system and that of the PC were enormous. Mac had an incredibly easy operating system (remember, the operating system is what manages the information you have in your machine) and became known as the company that made computers user-friendly. That translates to being easy to use, less intimidating, and more fun. They accomplished this through creative graphic design and the use of visual cues to access information on the computer.

Apple made the decision not to share its operating system with any other manufacturers. Think of it this way: Macs speak a special language all their own. The pickle is that Macs and PCs have different operating systems. When software is designed, it needs to be designed in one version for Macs to understand and in another version for all other PCs to understand. When Apple decided not to

THE PROS AND CONS OF MACS AND PCs

Pros

Macs

- still considered more user-friendly
- great service record
- used by most graphic designers

PCs

- less expensive
- software may hit the market first
- more brands available

Cons

Macs

- more expensive, but prices are dropping
- not always compatible with non-Mac software
- software can take longer to come to market

PCs

- design is still catching up to the Mac
- operating system is more of a target for viruses

STUDENTS

Florida residents who are 60 years of age or older may audit certain undergraduate courses at Florida Atlantic University tuition-free. Florida residency is established by living in the State of Florida for at least twelve (12) consecutive months prior to the start of the semester. Classroom space for 60+ Audit is based on availability after regular student registration. As such, registration for 60+ Auditors takes place after the end of the regular Drop/Add period. Course offerings are limited and vary each semester. These offerings are determined by the academic departments in conjunction with their faculty and represent the complete list of possible course offerings for the semester. We anticipate the course offerings for Fall 2021 to be available on Monday, July 12, 2021.

In order to be eligible to register for the courses, you must take these steps prior to registration.

If you are a first-time 60+ audit student or have not attended FAU within the past 12 consecutive months:

- Complete the Non-Degree Application and pay the non-refundable $30 application fee no later than Sunday, May 16, 2021. Documentation submitted late may not be processed in time for Summer registration on May 24, 2021. As course offerings differ each semester and registration is based upon seat availability, submission of an application does not guarantee an ability to enroll in preferred course(s).
- After your application has been processed, complete your Residency affidavit and upload your documents to the residency portal at <http://owlres.fau.edu/apps/>.

If you are a student that has participated in the 60+ Audit program within the last 12 months, you do not need to re-apply and will be able to register at the appointed time, provided there are no holds on your FAU account.

*If you have not submitted your application or residency documents, please do so immediately so that we may process your information before the May 24, 2021, registration date. Documentation that is submitted late may not be processed in time for Summer registration.

Although the campus is open, we will continue to have online registration for the 60+ Audit program. Online registration forms may be submitted beginning at 8 am on Monday, August 23, 2021 and continuing through 12:00pm on Monday, August 30, 2021. Online registration forms will be processed beginning at 8am based on the availability of 60+ courses and the order in which the forms were received.

WHO AND WHAT WE ARE

ILIR is a 501(c)3 organization of retired and semi-retired individuals interested in lifelong learning and cultural enrichment.

Our mission is to enhance the lives of attendees by peer learning, social interaction, and active participation in an academic environment.

The learning process takes place in small and large study groups, using the peer-learning model; that is, a partnership between students and facilitators. Our group leaders are all volunteers who give willingly of their time, talent and love of their subject.

For 25 years, the Institute for Learning in Retirement (I.L.I.R.) has provided stimulating educational programs for retirees of all ages. Over the years our stimulating courses have provided something for most tastes and interests, from science to art, music, current events, philosophy, government, law, foreign language and movies.

Several of them are drawn from our own students and board of directors. Many of them have professional experience in the subject they teach. Others have a long-standing love of their field and are well-versed and well-rehearsed in their subject matter.

Often guest speakers are invited to address the classes and some classes include live music, DVDs, CDs and slide presentation.

With the exception of a part-time Program Director, the entire organization is operated by volunteers.

There is an active volunteer Board of Directors that oversees every aspect of the institution, including finances and curriculum.

Classes for seniors.

Some colleges offer continuing education classes specifically for adults age 50 and older.

- These courses typically last a few weeks instead of an entire semester. In his traditional undergraduate classes and adult classes, Andrew Carle, an assistant professor at George Mason University, presents similar information but leaves more time for questions and discussion with the older students. “When I talk to a group of retirees, hands will be going up all over the place concurrent with the presentation. You don’t see that quite as much from undergraduates or even graduate students,” he says.
- There is also a network of Osher Lifelong Learning Institutes at approximately 120 colleges and universities in the U.S., including California Polytechnic State University, Texas Tech University, and the University of South Florida. These courses for older adults don’t require papers or exams, and the fees vary considerably by program. At George Mason, for example, the fees range from $125 to $350 annually for an unlimited number of courses over four semesters.

Online courses.

Many well-known universities such as MIT, Stanford, and Yale allow anyone to audit select courses online free of charge. Other colleges wave online course fees just for state residents above a certain age.

For example, seniors age 65 and older in North Carolina can take public university courses in person, online, or through correspondence for credit without paying tuition. “The online courses are pretty neat because you don’t have to leave the house,” says Peter Rizzolo, 80, a retired doctor who has taken classes both online and in person at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and North Carolina State University on topics including American history, art, and Italian. “I’ve gotten literally thousands of dollar worth of credits—120 or so—for free,” he says. “All I’ve paid for is my books and lab fees for courses like astronomy.” Shy students may be more likely to participate in online courses, Rizzolo adds. “Sometimes students are kind of hesitant to open their mouths and afraid to look foolish in class, but online you get time to think about it before you respond.”

Hidden Costs.

Even if you qualify for free tuition and watch out for fees, you'll still have to pay for things like books and parking (which is notoriously difficult to find and is a considerable expense on many college campuses.)

Many traditional courses also have online components, so you may need a computer and Internet access.

Says Margaret Rubega, an associate professor of ecology and evolutionary biology at the University of Connecticut, "I'm having the students use Twitter to make posts about what they are seeing in the bird life outside the course." She currently has one older student auditing her ornithology (bird science) class

No academic credit shall be awarded for attendance in classes for which fees are waived under this subsection. This privilege may be granted only on a space-available basis, if such classes are not filled as of the close of registration. A university may limit or deny the privilege for courses which are in programs for which the Board of Governors has established selective admissions criteria.
